

How to Open a Trading Account

India has been moving towards a cashless economy. It is faster, secure and more cost-efficient. Before the conversion, the stock markets operated on an open outcry system. Traders communicated verbally and through gestures to buy and sell shares. With the advent of electronic trading, a simple online command is enough to execute a trade. However, electronic trading has prerequisites like having a trading account and bank account to access the capital and commodity markets.

What is a Trading Account?

Similar to a bank account, a trading account is used to trade in different kinds of securities and commodities by the investor. Meanwhile, a trading account is required to hold or buy new securities and commodities. It is not possible to buy or sell a unit of security or commodity without a trading account.

You just have to place the order through the trading account and the request to buy/sell is forwarded to the stock exchanges. Before placing any order client has to deposit upfront required margin to his broker.

Features of Trading Account

A trading account is not limited to stocks, there are trading accounts for currencies, commodities, bonds, gold and exchange-traded funds. The biggest benefit is that you can open trading accounts online and not visit a bank or the office of the broker since trading accounts provide one-point access unlike physical trading.

Through a single trading account, you can access stock exchanges like BSE and NSE, commodity exchanges like Multi-Commodity Exchange and National Commodity and Derivatives Exchange. Opening trading accounts online gives you flexibility to trade through multiple mediums and trade through mobile, desktop or through a call.

Step-by-Step Guide on How to Open a Trading Account

Opening a trading account opens up a host of investing possibilities. You can open a trading account in a few simple steps:

In the first step, choose a brokerage firm to open a trading account after conducting a thorough research. Take the various charges levied by brokerages, the interface of the trading platform and the value-added services into account before finalizing a brokerage.

After selecting a broker, enquire about the trading account opening procedure. The brokerage will require you to fill up an account opening form and a Know Your Customer (KYC) form. A representative from the brokerage firm will assist you with the process.

You will also have to submit identity proof, residence proof and proof of income and bank statements. A photocopy of the Aadhar card or passport, besides several other documents, can be used as proof of residence and a copy of an Aadhar card or PAN card can be used as identity proof. The PAN card is compulsory to open a trading account.

Post submission of the documents, the brokerage will conduct a manual KYC verification. A representative may visit your house to verify the documents or an online verification will be conducted. If you do not want to manually verify the documents, you can opt for the e-KYC process. For the e-KYC process, your PAN card should be linked to the Aadhar card and your bank account. The mobile number submitted in the account opening form should be the same as the Aadhar card for the e-KYC process.

It generally takes 3-4 days to activate the trading account after the completion of the verification process.
